E. H. Bielfeldt Out For States Attorney

Elmer H. Bielfeldt, prominent attorney of Joliet, has announced his candidacy for the office of States Attorney of Will County on the Republican ticket.

Mr. Bielfeldt was born in the eastern part of Will County, at Beecher, Illinois and has been a resident of Will County all his life. He is a graduate of Northwestern University School of Law and ever since his admission to the Bar of this state, he has been actively engaged in the general practice of the law in Will County.

Associated With Law Firm Barr & Barr

Since his admission to the practice of the law and until the first of this year he has been associated with the law firm of Barr & Barr of Joliet. Mr. Bielfeldt is a successful lawyer. He first received distinction as liquidating agent of the First National Bank of Beecher. Through his efforts it became possible to pay all depositors in full and the stockholders received one hundred and nine percent on capital invested. His ability as a lawyer is well evidenced by the fact that since his admission to practice, he has been retained as counsel in practically all of the important litigation arising in the eastern part of this county, where he was born and raised.

Veteran of World War

During the World War, Mr. Bielfeldt enlisted in the United States Navy. Immediately after his enlistment, he was assigned to travel through the Northwest in the interest of the Liberty Loan. Later and until he was released from active duty, he served on the troop transport U. S. S. Mount Vernon.

Mr. Bielfeldt has always taken an active interest in Republican politics. For the past fifteen years he has actively campaigned Will County in the interest of better government, although he has never been a candidate for nor has he ever held public office. His activities in social and political affairs gives him a wide acquaintance.

When interviewed concerning his candidacy, Mr. Bielfeldt said: "I am a candidate for the office of States Attorney of Will County because of my personal desire to be such officer; and also because I believe I can be of service to the law-abiding citizens of this county. Disrespect for the law is a gnawing evil which is undermining our entire system of government and demands the strict attention of all citizens who believe in our system of government. Criminologists agree that officials who seek to gain office or perpetuate themselves in office by compromising with the violators of the law form a class of offenders most difficult to deal with in the solution of criminal problems. If I am nominated and elected States Attorney of this county, I promise the people of this county that I will never form an alliance with any violator of any law.

"I am not the candidate of, or under any obligation to any group or faction. I am engaged in the active practice of the law. Unfortunately a political campaign requires much time. While it will be necessary for me to devote a great deal of my time from now until the primary, to my campaign, yet, I shall continue the general practice of the law in this city. In fairness, however, to the law firm of Barr & Barr, with whom I have been associated for the past seven years, I have resigned as an associate of that firm, for the reason that I cannot devote my entire time to their practice. If I am nominated and elected States Attorney of Will County, I promise the people of this county, an administration based upon absolute fairness to all, without partiality, and the enforcement of all law."

Mr. Bielfeldt is a member of the Evangelical church, the American Legion (Harwood Post, Joliet, Ill.), Elks, Mason's, Eastern Star, Will County Bar Association and Illinois State Bar Association.

S. W. Highway To be Built

The banquet of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce held at the Southmoor Country Club Thursday night was a great success. There was a large crowd there from all the towns surrounding this section. A number of the County Commissioners were present as well as representatives from the Chamber of Commerce from Joliet and also the South Side of Chicago. The Orland Park and Blue Island Lions Clubs attended.

The speakers of the evening were Commissioners Jarowski and Kriz and a personal representative of president Cermack in the person of John Carroll. Mr. Sullivan of Chicago and Mr. Barker of the county highway department also were present.

Attorney John Savage represented the Joliet Chamber of Commerce. Rev. Wm. Gorey and Rev. Paul Sanders of Orland also were on the program.

There was a very fine spirit of Fellowship expressed. Every one seemed to be in the best of spirits over the meeting and many expressed themselves as it being the best meeting of its kind they had ever attended. The success of the evening was due to Edward Cowan, president of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce. It was thru his efforts that the meeting was planned and carried out to such a successful conclusion.

The problem of hardroads and the Southwest Highway was discussed. The need of a 40 foot road to the county line was stressed by all. The County Commissioners at present are planning to run the Southwest highway as a 40 ft. road to 123rd street and a 20 ft. road the rest of the way to 143rd street at Orland at which point the road will end for the present. It was the consensus of opinion of those present and especially those in authority that a 20 foot road to Orland would be inadequate as well as wholly unfair to the residents of the southwest section. The fact is that the map shows that the north and west sides of the county have been getting most of the hard roads while the southwest side has paid for more but have not received them. It was felt that the southwest section of the county has been sadly neglected in this and it was time that conditions were changing.

Wolf Road Receives Attention of State Highway Department

The fight for the paving of Wolf Road from the Cook-Will County line to the Lincoln highway south of Mokena is going merrily on. On Monday night the Mokena Development Association dispatched the following message to the state highway department and Gov. Small:

Whereas this association was the only organization in Will County to endorse and give publicity to the gas tax.

Whereas this association petitioned the Will County Board last September and again at their January meeting to Pave Wolf Road from the Cook county and Will County line, thereby connecting Cook county state aid road 81 now under construction with the Lincoln highway and state route 51 with funds derived from the gas tax which petitions were tabled by the Will County board without comment or discussion.

Whereas Cook county state aid route 81 has no outlet at the Cook and Will County line and whereas Mokena on Wolf Road has no connection with state bond issue routes and whereas the gas tax funds are for the special purpose of affording communication and connecting municipalities with state bond roads.

We now request that these petitions be given first consideration by the State Highway Department and the Will County Board.

Mokena Development and Hard Rd. Imprv. Asso.

In a personal talk with the editor of the News-Bulletin, Wednesday afternoon, Fred Francis, chairman of the Will County Bond Issue committee stated that he and his committee had just returned from Springfield from a conference with the State Highway Department and that the department had placed Wolf Road on the County Bond Issue map from the Cook and Will County line thru to the Lincoln highway. He also stated that the Southwest highway would be met by Will County, the route being Maple street to Marley and then along the west side of the Wabash to the county line. Mr. Francis said the Will County Board will be asked to approve the newly changed map at their meeting on March twentieth.

The paving of the front street of Mokena as outlined in the first county bond issue map has been dropped by the state in its revised map.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinski of 526 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

There were no guns, no casks, no bottles. The furniture was scant, and of substantial and inexpensive make. There was an oil heater in a corner, and a large tank nearly full of oil beside it. There was an oil cook stove, also, with pans, kettles and rough dishes. There was fishing tackle strewn about, old magazines, and in a corner cupboard a few rough ends of food: beans, coffee, salt and rice. Some canned things, too, and a piece of salt pork. There were old pipes lying about, cigar stubs and scattered tobacco. The room in every respect was exactly as it would be left by a group of fishermen, lumbermen or hunters.

Officers, inspectors, any one might step into the room, examine it from ceiling to rough rock floor, and find it above suspicion. Yet Rand knew that within a space of two hours fully thirty men had left that very spot.

With revolver and flashlight in hand again, he left the basement room and went to the stairs. Heavy curtains, thick and wide, covered every door and window so that no possible ray of light from within could be seen from without.

On the upper floor were sleeping rooms, six in all, and two baths, although the water was not connected and the tubs were dusty and dry. One of these rooms, the one on the north looking down to the cove, Rand knew had been occupied, although but rough blankets were thrown loosely on the bed. Still it had the feeling about it of recent occupancy.

"Gay's gentlemanly Ingram," he thought with a boyish grin. "Couldn't stand it below with the Chinks. No wonder his eyes are sad."

Satisfied at last, he went down, careful to leave everything behind him as he had found it, and clambered up through the narrow basement window again, not without great difficulty. Once more he was obliged to crawl out, head first, and return in order to replace the window as he had found it, which he did carefully, edging it tightly in, and blocking it loosely with rocks from without. Then he made his final exit.

"I hope nobody bangs me on the head before I have a chance to argue about it," he thought rather anxiously, as his legs sprawled out from beneath the piazza into the open air.

Evidently, however, the intrusion had been unobserved, and very hurriedly he threw the stones back into place to give the same appearance as before his entrance. Then he crossed the woods toward the Lone Pine.

It was after nine o'clock. Rand was not shaved, his face and hands were scratched and bleeding, his hair was matted with dust and bits of earth and moss, his clothes were grimy. He glanced down at himself, smiling. But he went on.

"I have no right to cheat her out of such a thrill as this," he decided. But he hurried his steps, for he had no desire to explain his appearance to any other but Gay.

Her amazement at his appearance at her door equaled his expectations.

"Rand—Rand," she gasped weakly. "Let me in, let me in," he urged laughingly. "Don't leave me out here with the burden of crime upon me, for the first Chink to take a pot shot at."

Hurriedly she drew him into the room, closed and locked the door behind him.

"Rand—Rand—what have you done?" she whispered.

She listened silently while he told, in sketchy fashion, the events of the night. Her eyes upon him were terrified and troubled. When he finished his recital with a jaunty triumphant gesture, she turned on him passionately.

"You shouldn't do such things," she cried thickly. "You should not! You have no right to take such chances. Oh, Rand, what do they care for murder? Think of that poor boy—"

It was not until he had been well fortified with strong coffee that she asked him gently, for her sake, to give up this ridiculous, dangerous enterprise and pay no more attention to the activities in the Little Club. She said she was sorry she had ever told him anything about the affair in the cove, she felt she had led him into terrible danger.

"I keep thinking of that boy, Rand. They are utterly unprincipled, unscrupulous. I know they are. They would stop at nothing. If anything happens to you, it will be my fault."

Rand tried to reassure her, promised to take every precaution, but he would not consent to give up the undertaking. He was sure he had his finger on a thread that would unravel a vast network of intrigue and crime involving many thousands of dollars, perhaps hundreds of lives. He was going to have the reward the unraveling would entail, not more important than that, he was going to have the sport of unraveling. He would not yield to her.

"And first of all, I'm going to show up your sad-eyed friend. He's a crook, and I'll prove it to you. Him, and his sad eyes!"

"Randle, dear," Gay said, her hands in his hair, drawing his face toward her, "did any one ever tell you that your eyes are sad, too? They are. Very sad. Your lips are merry and your voice is light, but your eyes are always wistful. The voice is what one makes it—but the eyes—Yes, open windows to the soul. Sad, very sad."

CHAPTER IX

It was amazing to Gay that the island, enmeshed as it was in a network of lawless enterprise so flagrant as to include open murder, should continue its placid aimless course of every-day, untroubled calm. The Captain fluttered from the hotel drains to the Nixon porch and talked regretfully of the work he did not accomplish on his boat.

Auntalmiry, who after Mrs. Andover's stern denial of a Christmas party, had remained wistful, quiet and meek, climbed the hill one day with the old bright happy flush on her cheeks, and old bright light in her weak blue eyes. She was laughing.

"Oh, it is a lovely morning, Gay, a lovely morning. Coming on to Christmas now, isn't it, coming on to Christmas?"

"Yes, it is. Did—Alice Andover say you could have the party, after all?"

Auntalmiry burst into joyous gentle laughter. "Oh, my dear, when I think of Alice Andover—dear Alice! She is a fine woman, for all her faults, one in a thousand. But when I think of all her administering, and her bossing, and her scheming—and all she gets for it—oh, no," she interrupted herself, trying to sadden her exuberance, "oh, no, no Christmas party this year. Oh, no!" She shook her little silvery head, but could not shake away that air of joy.

She said she had only come to borrow a bag, a good-sized hand-bag. She wanted to take—some things—over to town. She said she would like to keep it several days, if Gay did not mind, and promised to be very careful of it. She chose the larger of two hand-bags Gay gladly offered, explaining that she wanted it to hold—well—plenty.

A few days later she came again to explain that she was not yet through with the bag, and to suggest to Gay, if she did not mind, that perhaps it would be better not to say a word about it to Alice Andover.

"She's a fine woman," she said loyally, "one in a million, a credit to the island, a typical Maine character. A capable administrator, too, and all that. But once in a while she gets—well, as you might say—just a wee bit nosey."

Alice Andover, too, climbed the hill to the Lone Pine.

"See anything of that foolish old woman down there?" she inquired, jerking her head impatiently toward the orchard below.

"Once in a while. Not often."

"She's up to something. I don't trust that woman. You watch her, and if you see anything out of the way, you tell me. The administrator, and I've got to keep an eye on her."

It was disappointing both to Gay and Rand that with all the little threads of mystery within their grasp, nothing happened. They kept shrewd watch of forest, clubhouse and shore, but all remained silent and deserted, so that after a few weeks her interest waned. Rand, however, continued faithfully to go to the clubhouse every night, for he knew that eventually the gang would come again, and he was ready for them.

He had inquired about boats leaving Portland harbor at the time the Chinese immigrants left the clubhouse, and found there had been several freighters outward bound, two for the south, three for Europe, and one which had called at the port coming down from Canada. He had looked up the records of every one of these boats, and tabulated the information, but the name of Ronald Ingram was not connected with any of them. So he was obliged to await their return, and daily scanned the sailing reports for news of them.

October faded goldenly away, and November settled down grayly over the islands of Casco bay.

About noon on the third day of November, a cold rain set in, driven by a hard wind from the northeast. By midafternoon the first nor-easter of the season was raging along the coast. The rain had turned to cutting bits of ice, like burning chips from steel. All afternoon Gay sat in her window-seat, listened to the wind lashing the bare trees of the dear little forest, watched the white sleet which tore past the window on great gales of wind, and looked down to the sea, snow white with foam. Finally she fell asleep.

It was evening when a step on the porch and an accompanying whistle awakened her. She sprang to her feet and went forward, dizzily, to meet Rand.

Gay took his hands, let him gently to the window-seat, sat beside him.

"Rand," she said evenly, "if you want me to marry you, I will."

"Now, say it again, slowly. I don't think I understand."

"Yes, you do. If you want me to marry you, I will."

"If I want you to marry me—you will." Rand repeated slowly. He kissed her. "Thanks, Gay, but I don't."

Gay sighed a little, sighed in relief perhaps. Certainly she smiled, but it was a drawn smile that did not touch her darkened eyes.

The island shut itself up, more and more, behind the protective screens and storm windows that presaged the coming of winter. The women baked, and sewed, and chatted. The men got in the last of the wood, sorted the winter apples, went over the furnaces and the plumbing.

Mrs. Alice Andover came to the cottage, but not often, for she was fond of creature comforts, and her enthusiasm for the winter climate of her native state was limited to an oil burner in her furnace, a birch log in her fireplace, and a pretty Parisian knitted scarf about her aristocratic shoulders.

"What's the old fool doing now?" she demanded, with the brusque nod toward the orchard that meant Auntalmiry.

"I don't know," Gay said evasively. "I don't see much of her."

"I've been there a dozen times, and never nobody home," Mrs. Andover complained. "There's no fool like an old one. She's a perfect gadabout. Let's go down and see what she's up to."

So they went down the hillside and knocked at the door of the Apple Tree. There was no answer, although distinctly they could hear slight sounds within, quick shuffling, muffled footsteps, the sly creaking of a door, then silence. Alice Andover turned the knob, but the door was locked. She marched grimly around the house, Gay following, and tried the kitchen door, only to find it locked also.

Shamelessly she peered in every window, one after another, but there was nothing to see but the tidy house, empty.

"The old fool is in the closet," Alice Andover said grimly. She rapped smartly on the window. "Auntalmiry, Auntalmiry, come out! We see you—come on out, you big ostrich!"

But there was no answer.

"She's up to something," Alice Andover said anxiously. "She's mad about that Christmas party. All for her own good, and that's all the thanks I get."

First Rude Telescope Evolved by Accident

When the son of a Sixteenth century spectacle maker in Holland picked up some spectacle lenses in his father's shop one day and happened to hold up two of them, one in each hand, he was surprised on looking through both lenses to see the weathercock on a neighboring church steeple greatly enlarged. Excited by this discovery, he ran to his father and told him what he had seen. The father immediately took the two lenses and repeated the experiment. The result confirmed his boy's report and the father set to work at once, fixing two movable lenses on a board—an idea suggested to him by the varying view he had obtained by moving the lenses in his hands—and thus the first rude telescope came into being.

Moonlight and Plants

There is an impression that moonlight injures plants. This is a fallacy. The moon shining brilliantly implies a clear night, and this in turn means a markedly lower temperature, even to the extent of ground frost—and it is this night cold, not the bright rays of the moon, which damages the plants.

I thought, just to pacify her," she said fiercely. "I'd let her fix little bags of candy and nuts for the children, though they don't deserve it. Throwing snowballs, chasing cats, breaking windows— But just to please her. So I ordered fifty pounds of Christmas candy sent to her."

"Oh, that's just dear of you—"

Alice Andover frowned at her. "John pays half. I'm only the administrator. John pays half. She's got fruit, she's got vegetables, her cupboard full of canned goods, and her cellar full of coal and wood. She can't want for anything. Can she?"

It did not seem indeed that she could. Her larder had been bounteously and gloriously stocked—a hundred pounds of sugar, brown and white, cereals, raisins, dried fruits, beans, canned goods. No, certainly she could not be in need of anything. Besides, there was her charge account at the grocery, and her modest account at the bank.

"You don't suppose she would go on a starvation diet to spite me," said Alice Andover anxiously. "I don't think she knows enough to do that."

When Alice Andover had gone, Gay went down again alone. Mrs. Andover's anxiety had communicated itself to her, and Gay was persistent. She meant to find out if Auntalmiry stood in need.

She anticipated a long wait on the door-step, and she intended to wait. So she was a little surprised when Auntalmiry, who had evidently been watching and knew she came alone, opened the door to her first light tap.

"That was not nice," Gay said severely. "Alice Andover is very uneasy about you. It isn't right to worry her."

Auntalmiry burst into soft but joyous laughter, unashamed.

"Oh, the administrator. When I think of Alice Andover—" Auntalmiry was quite speechless with secret satisfaction.

"But why did you keep us out?"

"Now, Gay, don't be cross. It's just a little secret of mine. You'll know before long. I was doing something I didn't want Alice Andover to know about. Now let's have a nice cup of tea. It's good to see you again."

But for all her pleasantness Gay returned at last no wiser than she came.

November did not live up to the threat of its coming. The weeks passed. But two days before Thanksgiving, Gay awakened in the morning to find the island thickly blanketed with snow, the trees pendant with it, the valley submerged. And great cloudy flakes whitened the air.

"This is beautiful, it is worth living for," Gay thought. "How childish to live always in a city where snow means only slush, and grime, and murky skies."

She sat in the window-seat and watched it for hours, tracing the course of the great white flakes, and listening for the soft little kiss with which each dropped among his brothers. By afternoon all the low brush and shrubs were thickly covered, the forest was a solid glistening wall, and the line of boats upturned on the shore was like a row of grave mounds. The afternoon waned, and finally, a little depressed with the silence and the aloneness of it all, she was aimlessly tidying up her rooms when she heard a gay voice calling:

"Hello, the house. Come out, and see the sun."

She ran down to find Rand, in snow half to his waist, at her window that led to the valley, which he was struggling to raise from without.

Gay caught up a warm cape, and ran to help him.

"You darling!" she cried, in warm welcome.

Are You Really Well?

To Be Fit There Must Be Proper Kidney Action.

Do you find yourself running down—always tired, nervous and depressed? Are you stiff and achy, subject to nagging backache, drowsy headaches and dizzy spells? Are kidney secretions scanty and burning in passage? Too often this indicates sluggish kidneys and shouldn't be neglected.

Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, increase the secretion of the kidneys and thus aid in the elimination of waste impurities. Doan's are endorsed everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Mellon Family Richest

The Mellon family is probably the richest in America, with the Ford, Rockefeller and Baker families following in the order given. This is the conclusion of a writer in the Boston News Bureau, a financial newspaper, who says that based on actual value of securities and asset values of other property owned, the Mellon family heads the list. The 4,300,716 shares of Gulf Oil company stock held by the Mellons is cited as one reason. And this is only one of the big industries in which the Mellon family is interested.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste, it's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

COMBINING SILK WITH JERSEY; NEW TWO-PIECE TAILORED SUIT

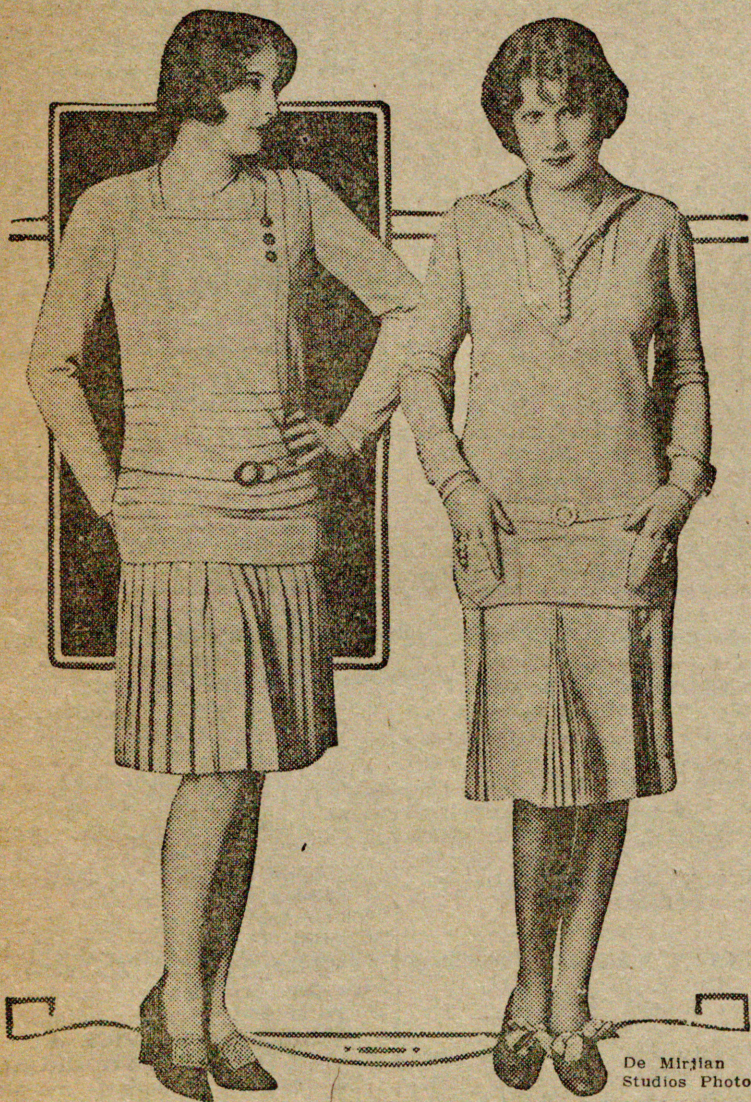

SPORTS frocks which combine silk weaves with jersey are newer than the all-jersey type. The combining of two materials, which is so pronounced in the spring mode, has brought into play the imagination of designers, who in their effort to attain distinction for the newer frocks are releasing a wealth of ideas in their fashioning. As a consequence much is being made of insets, appliques, pipings, bindings and other detailing which tends to successfully interwork contrasting weaves.

Outstanding in sports frocks is the fact of color, which is making a most eloquent plea through pastel tones and tints. In this handling of color, blouse which is of superfine light-weight jersey. A bordering of the silk of the skirt finishes the hemline of the blouse, also the neckline is silk-bordered. Fancy stitching traverses the waistline row-and-row to a considerable depth.

Dull-finished crepe satin in a subtle pink tone is matched to jersey for the winsome frock to the right. The plaited skirt is of the satin, responding to which is a stitched bias border which outlines a vestee effect on the blouse. The buttons and various other details are of the satin.

the dominant thought is to keep the dress in monotone. That is, the silk or crepe satin or flat crepe combined with the jersey is a "perfect match." The colors exploited this season are indescribable, so subtle, so exquisite are they.

Pink tones which are soft and dusky, greens which seem frosted to paleness, blues and yellows in every phase, and that which is especially highlighted by the mode this season—natural tones. The latter emphasizes leghorn shades and grege tones which are just one degree removed from white. This list also includes the modish oatmeal colors. Contrasting these are many accepted bright hues, especially red which is very smart and a range of what are designated as "parrot colors" which introduces vivid yellow, greens and blues.

The big thought for sports wear is that the felt hat or crocheted or any of the new "linen straws" be an ex-suits, the importance of which is declared by advance spring showings.

Many of the latest models are adorably feminized. Not that the classical tailleur is out of the running; on the contrary, trim tuxedo types in navy or black with one button, rounded corners and satin-faced notched revers are quite the newest of the new, but they have a rival in the tailleur with the "feminine touch." Enthusiasm for this type is assured among those who delight in softening details that contradict the severely "man-tailored" sort.

The suit in this picture introduces a beguiling new feature in the way of a skirt with a scalloped hemline. Inverted tucks also give a new aspect to the skirt. The combination is gray and white which is also a distinctive following of the dictate of the spring mode. Silver fox it is which trims this white serge costume. The models in this picture are two newest versions of frocks fashioned of jersey with silk. The skirt of the handsome two-piece to the left is of crepe satin accurately matched to the

MOKENA M.E. CHURCH NOTES

Glen T. Beaty, Pastor

Sunday School 10:30 a. m.

Worship Service at 7:00 p. m.

Mr. Beaty will preach a Bible sermon on "The Temptation of Jesus" Sunday evening. There will be something for every age in this sermon. We welcome all to our services, regardless of creed or belief. Our church belongs to the community and we want to serve all who need our service.

Sunday evening immediately following the worship service, our official board will meet. Reports of the business thus far in the conference year will be made. We invite all who are interested to sit with us and hear the business.

How interested are YOU in seeing the boys and girls of Mokena grow up into folk of fine usefulness and Christian character? Christian training is important for such attainment. The Sunday school is one of the primary places for such training. Yet, it cannot be done without adults who will consecrate themselves to the task. We need more teachers in our Sunday school and just now we have a group of eight boys without a teacher. Who is coming to the rescue of these fine fellows? It will mean sacrifice; but our religion always demands sacrifice. Christ set the example of supreme sacrifice; it pays rich rewards in spiritual things.

L. G. Bruder attended a coal dealers banquet at the Congress hotel in Chicago Thursday night.

WORTH

MODERN BARN DANCE GREAT SUCCESS

The modern barn dance given in the Worth Garage by the Good Fellowship Club Saturday night was a decided success. It was a new venture in the community recreation and proved a decided step forward in solving the recreation problem.

The good citizens, mothers, fathers, sons and daughters were all there. Oak Lawn, Chicago Ridge, Worth, Palos Park and Orland were represented by some of their best people. It was a great treat to see the parents enjoying the party with their children. The young people have been condemned for going to "roadhouses and wayside dance halls to dance. They have done it just because they had no place at home to enjoy themselves. Worth has solved that problem. The good citizens presence there set the tone of the party and every one enjoyed it.

LINCOLN DAY SERVICE AT WORTH CHURCH

The services Sunday morning were given over to the celebration of that Great Man of the Ages, Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Povenmire had charge of the service. He was assisted by Mr. Perry Bishop and the choir. The Gettysburg address was read by Mr. Bishop and many of Lincoln's famous sayings. The choir sang a number of negro spirituals which were very fine. Mr. Povenmire spoke of the negro problem as the continuation of the task that Lincoln so nobly begun.

SPECIAL PRE LENTEN SERVICE NEXT WEEK

The Worth church under Mr. Sanders has always made a special observance of the Lenten period and the Sunday preceeding Lent is always set aside as a day in preparation for this great period of the year. This period has come to mean much to Worth community, in fact it has become one of the high points in the community life. At the morning service Sunday Feb. 19 the sacrament of Communion will be observed as a fitting beginning of the Lenten season.

Meaning of Girl's Names

The name Olive is simply that of the pretty tree of the Mediterranean and other warm countries. Dorothy is a name of Greek origin, and means literally "gift of God." Anna comes from Hebrew and Greek sources, and signifies "grace;" while Mildred is from the Anglo-Saxon, the parent of our own language, and means "mild one."

Hermits' Cells Remain

The mountains near the city of Jericho, says one who explored many of them, "are absolutely honeycombed by the cells of ancient anchorites and hermits from top to bottom." Some of these contain frescoes and inscriptions of much interest, dating back to the earliest years of the Christian era.

Poet's Error

Literally "derring do" means "daring to do." But Spenser mistakenly used it as a noun phrase and it has been popularly used ever since to mean daring feats or desperate courage. Spenser says: "Dad for his derring doe and bloody deed."—Pathfinder Magazine.

Injurious Dust

The Public Health service says marble and stone cutters, dry grinders, drillers and other workers who inhale "hard" dust, are especially subject to tuberculosis. "Soft" dust from coal, limestone, wood, cotton or wool is not very injurious.

YEAR by year the telephone equipment wears out and has to be replaced at prices much higher than the original cost of the old plant. This adds constantly to the average investment per telephone, on which a return must be earned. The company's revenues must keep up with this rise.

Milk Producers Association 19 Years Old Feb. 7

The 19th anniversary of the organization of the Milk Producers Association was celebrated by the annual meeting of the Association held in the Sherman hotel, Chicago on February 7th.

The meeting was held under the same roof where this organization was born on February 1st, 1909. Those present had one thought in mind, namely - A better price for milk - and were just as determined a bunch of farmers as met there nearly twenty years ago. Both these meetings might be likened to the convention which drafted the Declaration of Independence.

We, still have some Patrick Henrys and they are in the dairy business, but we need more of them in every community.

The Officers elected for 1928 are as follows:-

President, Frank T. Holt, Kenosha, Wisconsin. 1st Vice Pres. Alex Johnson, Waseo, Illinois. 2nd Vice Pres. W. F. Bohr, Lake Zurich, Ill. 3rd Vice Pres. O. J. Sauerman, Crown Point, Indiana. Secretary, E. C. Rockwell, Lake Zurich, Illinois. Treasurer, J. W. Wingate, Crystal Lake, Illinois. Two Assistant Secretaries were elected, W. J. Kittle, Crystal Lake, Illinois. E. H. Schrage, Crete, Illinois.

Good Printing

THE kind of printing that pays dividends is the kind you should have. Pale, muddy, poorly arranged printed matter is worse than none. The quality of your business is often judged by the quality of your stationery—superior printing gives an impression of cheapness that is hard to overcome, while good printing carries with it a desirable suggestion of quality.

We produce only Quality Printing. Whether you want an inexpensive handbill or a letterhead in colors, if you order it from us you will be sure of getting good work. We have the equipment and the "know how" that enables us to get out really good printing—printing that impresses people with the good taste of its users. That is the only kind of printing that

A Difficulty of Middle Age

Perhaps the hardest time for a middle-aged man to think he feels just as young as he used to be is just after he has gone up a couple of flights of stairs at a fairly brisk pace.—Ohio State Journal.

The "Lantern Cooler's" Profession. Among the theatrical agencies where talent is to be employed for occasions a new calling is that of "lantern cooler." Glorious Contemplation

An English parliamentary candidate wound up a frenzied oration as follows: "Gentlemen, the glorious victory which will swamp our opponents when the eve of the election dawns upon us will re-echo in words of gold through the corridors of time, until the last grand trump shall sound through the valleys on the mountaintops."

Today.

There is a thing called yesterday, but that is only the dust-bin at the door, into which we cast our refuse, our failures, our worn-out souls. There is a thing called tomorrow, bursting with far better things than those which we have discarded. But in today the whole passionate force of the universe is poured—and therefore today is marvellous.—S. P. B. Maile.

Century of Steam

Just 100 years ago the Baltimore & Ohio road laid the first commercial railway track in the world. Since that time more than 420,000 miles of railroad have been constructed in this country alone. This is more than one-third of the aggregate mileage of the world. The steel and steam lines are not to be pushed out of the picture by a gesture from the motorists and aviators. There is a notable centennial of service.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson
Illinois Press Association

Political atmosphere was cleared to a marked degree when the State Supreme court decided constitutional the primary election law of 1927, including the legislative primary act. The court's decision came on the very eve of the first day for filing primary petitions and assured the primary election for April 10 and at the same time gave the state a legal election after four others had fallen by the legal wayside. Four justices of the court signed the opinion. Chief Justice Oscar E. Heard, Freeport, and Justices Warren W. Duncan, Marion; Clyde E. Stone, Peoria, and Frederic R. De Young, Chicago, all Republicans, voted to sustain the law. The dissenting justices were William M. Farmer, Vandavia, and Floyd E. Thompson, Rock Island, Democrats, and Frank K. Dunn, Republican, Charleston. The majority opinion was written by Justice Stone. The finding came after a conference lasting several hours, the first of its kind to be held in many years. When the opinion was filed in the office of Clerk Charles W. Vail, political and legislative disputes were ended. In addition to tossing into the waste basket a score of primary bills, which are pending before the special session of the general assembly, the court opened the way for an active primary campaign. But that did not end the case appealed from Chicago, in which Judge Fisher held the act invalid. The injunction issued by Judge Fisher restraining Secretary of State Emmerson from filing primary petitions, remains in effect, the result that petitions will be received and not filed until the Fisher injunction has been dissolved. The legislature will make a few changes and the primary will be held April 10.

In spite of the fact that the decision of the State Supreme court leaves the legislature with little to do on the 1927 primary law, there is still a large amount of other work to be done before the special session comes to an end. The only repairing to be done on the primary law has to do with registration in Chicago, but it is considered doubtful if 102 votes can be mustered in the house. The bonding and revenue legislation which is pending seems to be skating on thin ice, as leaders are doubtful if all members will return to the capital city because of the primary campaign. The bonding bills are important to the downstate. One which is pending before the senate gives large cities authority to go 5 per cent with bonds, and 102 votes would be necessary to pass it in the house and 84 in the senate. A number of other bills, which have to do with revenue in the downstate and park taxes in Chicago are also pending on the calendar. Leaders are attempting to bring about a full attendance in both branches in order to show good faith and pass all the bills which are on the calendar. It is now certain that there will be no second special session, leaders declare. If the present session lasts another week or ten days the campaign will be under way and members will be anxious to return to their home districts and become active.

Gov. Len Small has added a poultry disease specialist to the staff of the poultry husbandry division of the state department of agriculture. Dr. N. H. Kyle, veterinarian, who has gained wide recognition as a poultry disease expert, has served in connection with the division of animal husbandry, under the direction of the chief veterinarian, Dr. F. A. Laird. In effecting this transfer to the poultry husbandry division, Governor Small took into account the fact that Illinois, at the three poultry experimental projects at Quincy, Kankakee and Murphysboro, has assembled at all times, several hundred of the best laying hens in America. To insure their health in general, he has detailed Doctor Kyle to administer disease prevention measures, and to give his service to poultry specimens in the state's custody that may need the attention of a skilled veterinarian.

First Assistant Attorney General Montgomery Winning has taken the initial step to dissolve the injunction pending against Secretary of State Emmerson and County Clerk Robert Switzer, restraining them from filing political petitions. He filed the motion in the State Supreme court to have the injunction order dissolved or in the alternative to have it suspended pending the final disposition of the Chicago case involving the validity of the primary election law of 1927. The injunction was issued by Judge Fisher of Chicago, who held the primary law invalid. The Supreme court in a recess opinion held the law constitutional in a case filed by Attorney General Carlstrom.

Bids for the construction of approximately 90 miles of hard roads and several sections of heavy grading and bridges have been received by the state department of public works. Bids were also received for the construction of a bridge across the Illinois river at Pekin, for which the general assembly has appropriated $400,000.

The bids will be taken under advertisement and contracts when awarded will become a part of the 1,000 miles of hard roads, work on which has been outlined by the state.

The state division of highways has awarded the following pavement contracts:

Route 110, section 114, Livingston county, to Indiana Road Paving company, Rochester, Ind., $128,004.41.

Route 73, section 128, DeKalb-Kane counties, to Trompeter and Sons, Peru, $110,788.70.

Route 81, section 102W, Henry county, to Central Engineering company, Davenport, Iowa, $133,927.72.

Route 88, section 125, Peoria county, to Cameron Joyce and company, Keokuk, Iowa, $167,035.97.

Bids for the construction of approximately 90 miles of pavement, the largest for a long period of time, have been received by the state department of public works and buildings. In addition proposals were received for bridge and grading sections, all of which are a part of the state building program for the year.

Including in the bidding, which attracted contractors from the Central West, was the bridge across the Illinois river at Pekin, for which the general assembly appropriated $400,000. Figures compiled show that the bridge will cost approximately $450,000.

By virtue of a statute prohibiting the firing of arms upon a public highway, hunting with a gun upon a highway would be unlawful, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has informed the state's attorney of Will county. The attorney general further ruled that hunting without a gun would be violation of the law, inasmuch as right of way for a road is taken for highway purposes only and any other use of the property would be vested in the owner of the land on which the highway abutted.

A department of the office of public accounts which is of great importance is that of land titles. After more than two years of painstaking search the records in this department have been revised and codified to such an extent that any grant or patent of any piece of land in Illinois can be readily ascertained through a card filing system. There are over 150,000 cards containing the index to the townships and ranges in the state. The importance of this will be readily appreciated by abstractors, attorneys and others interested in land titles. Previous to this systematizing of these documents the vaults were filled with loose records and books relative to all grants and patents issued by the United States government and the state of Illinois to original land holders in the ten districts which formerly comprised the state of Illinois. Before this indexing it was necessary to look through thousands of documents in order to trace the original grant or patent. The new system was installed by State Auditor Oscar E. Nelson.

To have delayed the construction of the bridge across the Illinois river at Florence for political reasons would have been the height of folly, Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer, said in a letter made public a few days ago to Jess M. Thompson, secretary of the Pittsfield Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Sheets produced weather data to show that floods in the river valley necessitated the delay.

"We have not permitted political considerations to interfere without giving the people of Illinois the highway service to which they are entitled," Mr. Sheets said in part. The bridge, Mr. Sheets says, will be completed as soon as possible, probably by the end of 1928, and "we will see to it that a first-class structure is built."

Farmers, exhibiting beef and dairy cattle and fat hogs, at the county and other agricultural fairs in Illinois last year, drew down in premiums more than $160,000, according to reports of secretaries compiled in the state department of agriculture's state fair division office. Cattle premium payments made in 1927, by the 71 exhibitions that participated in state funds, totaled $101,616.20, and in the swine departments $58,488.47 was passed out to the successful exhibitors. This does not include the premium payments at the Illinois state fair. The beef cattle exhibitors drew $16,842 and exhibitors of dairy animals received $14,520. Swine premium totaled $8,819.

The weekly report of Dr. Isaac D. Rawlings, director of the state department of public health shows 160 cases of diphtheria, 362 cases of scarlet fever and 408 cases of pneumonia in the state. There are also 30 cases of smallpox, 16 of typhoid fever, 36 of influenza, 297 of whooping cough, 253 of tuberculosis, 328 of mumps, 340 of chickenpox and 84 of measles.

Eighty members of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce sailed from New Orleans the other day on a 19-day trip in the Caribbean sea. It was the beginning of the organization's second good will expedition to Latin-American countries. The party will visit Cuba, Porto Rico, Honduras, Panama, Colombia, and Guatemala.

Forty-seven years is a long time on one job but William Marlowe has just rounded out that many years for the state as custodian of the Supreme court building. Mr. Marlowe, who is in his ninety-third year, has the distinction of being the oldest state employee and perhaps has a wider acquaintanceship, especially among court justices and those who practice in the higher courts, than any other man. Mr. Marlowe entered the employ of the state when he was given a position by the late James McCartney, attorney general.

Lesson for February 19

TWO MIRACLES OF POWER

LESSON TEXT—Mark 4:35-5:20.
GOLDEN TEXT—What manner of man is this that even the wind and the sea obey him?

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Stills the Storm.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Rules the Storm.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Universal Power of Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus' Power over Nature and Human Life.

1. Jesus Calms the Sea (vv. 35-41).

1. Crossing the sea (vv. 35, 36).

Wearied by teaching the multitudes, He proposed that they take ship at evening time to the other side of the sea, doubtless to escape from the throngs of people.

2. Overtaken by a storm (v. 37).

Even though Jesus was in the boat with the disciples they were overtaken by a storm. It is not God's will that we should escape the storms, but those who have Christ on their boat are safe because that boat cannot go down.

3. Jesus asleep in the storm-tossed boat (v. 38).

In the midst of the turbulent elements He was resting in sleep. The day had been a very strenuous one and He was weary. He who made the sea could well lie down and sleep, though the storm violently raged.

4. The terrified disciples (v. 38).

In their minds nothing but disaster and death awaited them. They were not only terrified, but they chided Jesus for sleeping while they were in such great danger.

5. Christ's rebuke (vv. 39, 40).

(1) The wind (v. 39).

This showed the Lord's mighty power to control the forces of nature.

(2) The disciples (v. 40).

He rebuked them for their lack of faith. He showed that they were looking upon their circumstances instead of upon their Lord.

6. The effect upon the disciples (v. 41).

They were filled with great fear. A little while ago they were afraid in the face of the storm; now they are afraid in the presence of the Lord.

11. Jesus Heals the Gadarene Demoniac (5:1-20).

After the stilling of the tempest, Jesus crossed to the other side of the sea into heathen territory.

1. Met by a demon possessed man (vv. 1-6).

This man was in a desperate condition. He was so fierce that no one could safely pass that way. He wore no clothes (Luke 8:27). No chains were strong enough to hold him and no one was able to tame him. In the night time his hideous cries could be heard while he vented his rage by cutting himself with stones. Many today are demon possessed. Much of the insanity of the age is traceable to this cause. As the coming of the Lord draweth nigh these things will increase (1 Tim. 4:1).

2. What the demons knew about Christ (vv. 7-9).

They knew that He was the Son of God and that He had come to destroy the devil and his works. Among the demons there is no doubt as to the deity of Christ and the judgment to come, though we have many theologians and preachers who say they do not believe it. The devil blinds their eyes so they cannot understand (II Cor. 4:4).

3. Christ's power to deliver from the devil (vv. 10-13).

He cast out the demons from the man (v. 8). The demons quail before Christ, not daring to dispute His power, so they begged to be permitted to enter the swine. As soon as the Lord issued the permit, they hastened away to hurl the swine to destruction.

4. The effect upon the people of the city (vv. 14-17).

The keepers of the swine fled to the city and made report of what had occurred. This miracle brought the people out, but when they realized the loss of their hogs they sought Him to leave their coasts. They cared more for their hogs than for Christ and the cure of this man. These Gadarenes have many successors today.

The man who was healed sent home to testify (vv. 18-20).

No doubt it would have been safe and pleasant to abide with Jesus, but his friends needed his testimony. The best witness for Christ is one who has been saved by Him. The best place to begin that testimony is at home where one is known best.

Hamlet's Home Restored

Only the canopy taken to Stockholm by the conquering King Charles X in 1658 will be absent when the Kronberg castle at Oeresund is opened as a museum.

Denmark's wonderful castle of the Renaissance—home of Hamlet—has been completely restored. Authorities are now ready with plans to refit it as a museum, with its old paintings, furniture and gobelins, these relics to be retrieved from the Danish museums.

Help Kidneys By Drinking More Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Help Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation.

A woman will pardon a want of sense quicker than a want of manners.

ORLAND

There was a meeting of the executive committee of the Chicago Southwest Suburban Community Training School at the Orland M. E. church on Sunday afternoon.

The plans for the school are progressing well. It will begin Tuesday night Feb. 28 at 6:30 p. m. There will be a supper served at the church after which will be the opening night of the school. This will offer a very fine opportunity for the churches of this section to train their Sunday School teachers under those who are experts in the field. Most of the teachers will be supplied by the International Council of Religious Education. The school will be run under their direction. Rev. Kennedy of Palos Park who is dean of the school has been working hard on it and has it worked out in a very fine way. All the communities of this section are invited to take a part in this school.

The most distinguished English woman preacher of the present age, Maude Royden speaks on Old Truths and the Younger Generation Sunday afternoon Feb. 19 at Orchestra hall, Chicago.

The Sunday Evening Community Service at the Orland M. E. church was a real success Sunday night. There was a very good crowd out and all seemed to enjoy the special Lincoln service. Mr. Sanders conducted the vesper service at the opening of the evening service. This was followed by congregational singing lead by Clarence Beagley. The Worth choir sang some negro spirituals which were very fine. Miss Haehnlein gave some readings on Lincoln followed by a special number of the Junior choir. Mr. Pence, a colored man from Evanston was the speaker of the evening. He spoke on the problem of the negro race.

A special Boy Scout program is being planned for next Sunday evening. All the boys and their parents are especially invited.

WLS Has Fur Expert

Service to those who kill or trap animals whose fur is valuable, be it one animal or one hundred, is given by WLS, the Sears Roebuck Station, through Johnny Muskrat. Twice each week, Tuesdays and Fridays at 6:30, Johnny Muskrat tells all that is new in the world of trapping and furs and has prepared a booklet on trapping and care of furs. Johnny's other name is Frank Spencer. He is a westerner, having come to Chicago from Seattle. Before he came he took time to graduate from the University of Washington. Through Johnny Muskrat's service, farmers are able to market their furs readily and do not have to save them up to get a large supply. This service, Johnny has found, is much appreciated.

MOKENA

A daughter was born in Silver Cross hospital. Thursday, to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Barnes.

Dickie, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hirsh, is ill with pneumonia.

Miss Mildred Butler entertained the Mokena High school students at a Valentine party at her home Tuesday evening. A good time was had.

Last Thursday evening, Feb. 9th, Mokena folks enjoyed a delightful vaudeville program put on by the popular Julian Entertainers under the direction of Mr. Julian Whitworth. The peppy little pianist, Miss Dessa Mae Riley started off the evening program. Little Betty Johnson won the hearts of the audience with her easy childish grace and her sweet voice in catchy songs and dances. Paul Boucher, the 8 year old clog dancer proved that even a real boy could trip the light fantastic with the best of them. Helen Wilson teased many a laugh out of her hearers with her Scotch Irish costume and her be-a-utiful monologue about herself as the 'Belle of Si Corners. Miss Glasscock charming soprano of the Joliet Conservatory of Music, made us forget that we were living in the age of ragtime by her classic and popular songs. She also appeared in a pleasing solo dance in the hoop skirt of long ago and sang the story of how grandma made love when she was sweet sixteen. Franklin E. Kelsall Radio Star appeared in songs and stories. His announcing wove all the acts into a beautiful complete program. He was assisted by Muriel Renter and her Tin solidier group of dancers. Professor Leland in 15 minutes of magic and mystery added a magic touch to the evenings entertainment.

Miss D. B. B. Davey from Wilmington won repeated applause by her accordin solo and clog dancing. The Salador Brothers Italian troubadours proved once more that mandolin and guitar selections are still popular.

Marley to Get Electric Service

Marley is coming into its own at last. The latest is she is going to have electric light and power. The Public Service is now setting poles and it is expected that the service will be in operation within 2 weeks. It is understood that the Wabash caused this new improvement by signing up for power to operate their water pumping station at Marley.

Former Teacher Goes to Trial

The trial of Clarence Uhl, former Mokena school principal who was arrested in Evanston last week on a theft charge, will be held in Evanston Friday of this week.

Sea Superstitions

We are indebted to the seamen of antiquity for the belief that kingfishers cast a spell upon the deep, so that calm weather prevails during the "halcyon days," about the time of the winter solstice. Old salts object to the presence of a cat on board ship, because she "carries a gale in her tail." —Exchange.

Found in Tobacco Leaves

Tobacco leaves when submitted to chemical analysis yield nicotine, which is its most characteristic constituent; albumin, a gluten-like substance; gum, resin, malic and citric acids, and a large amount of inorganic constituents, 100 parts of the dry leaf yielding from about 19 to 27 per cent of ash, in which potash, lime and silica predominate.

Then He Understood

A little Needesha (Kan.) boy, according to the Sun, was shown a drop of water through a powerful microscope, and was impressed at the tiny objects which he was told were microbes. "I know now," he said, "what bites you when you drink soda water."
